Jeremy Miller Named Deputy Chief of Wireline Competition Bureau's Competition Policy Division

Washington, D.C. – Jeremy Miller has been named Deputy Chief of the Competition Policy Division of the FCC's Wireline Competition Bureau. The Division develops and implements policies relating to local telecommunications markets, including deployment of broadband and Internet telephony services.

Mr. Miller had been serving as Assistant Chief for the Division. In that position, he supervised implementation of various aspects of the Telecommunications Act of 1996, including the Commission's recent adoption of new rules governing the availability of unbundled network elements. Mr. Miller has also managed several adjudicatory proceedings, including applications by the regional Bell companies for authorization to provide long-distance service and interconnection arbitrations. He previously served as Special Counsel to the Division, and has consulted on the ongoing proceedings on IP-enabled services.

Mr. Miller joined the Division as a Senior Attorney in March 2001. He came to the FCC from Hogan & Hartson LLP, where he specialized in telecommunications law. Before entering private practice, Mr. Miller clerked for the Honorable Charles A. Richey at the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Mr. Miller received his J.D., cum laude, from the University of Michigan School of Law, where he was an associate editor of the Michigan Law Review, and received his B.A., magna cum laude, from Brown University.
